Over 3.6 Million Californians Face Cuts That Their Own Congress Members Voted For: Data by District

Over five million Californians rely on direct help through the Affordable Care Act (ACA), either to get their coverage through the Medicaid (Medi-Cal) expansion, or to get financial assistance to afford a private health plan through Covered California. Over 1.2 million Californians who receive these direct benefits live in districts where their Congress member voted for a repeal proposal that would cut these benefits. Including the broader cut and caps to the whole of the Medi-Cal program, over 3.6 million residents in these districts would face cuts to their care.
